CAPT. EDWARD RICKENBACKER MISSING ON BROAD EXPANSE OF PACIFIC; FEAR EXPRESSED THAT HE AND CREW CRASHED

Legion of Friends of "Ace of Aces" Hope, However, That "Rick" Will Once More Defy The Death That Hovered At His Elbow for 35 Years—Last Heard From By Radio On Thursday Evening

By Frank Conniff
(L. N. S. Special Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Somewhere on the broad expanse of the Pacific, Capt. Edward Vernon Rickenbacker has once again crossed paths with the inscrutable fate that has followed his destiny through three decades of legendary exploits.

Since his feats of derring-do first projected him into the national limelight over 30 years ago, the big, unassuming airplane executive has often skirted that thin marginal line that separates the bold from sudden oblivion.

And always, the "ace of aces" emerged with new laurels, his fame solidified by each fresh contact with lurking death, his stature as an American hero enhanced by another triumph over awesome odds.

Capt. "Eddie" Rickenbacker long ago assumed the proportions of a living legend. His career, with its Alger-like overtones, has been an inspiration to countless Americans. His patriotism and devotion to country are words of household currency.

He has won the honors conferred by a grateful country with a modest grace in keeping with his rare character. But today, while all America anxiously awaits word from the Pacific, it is only fitting to revise his previous—and successful—brushes with destiny.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Captain Edward V. Rickenbacker, famed World War I ace and confidential adviser to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, is overdue southwest of Pearl Harbor in the middle stretch of an aerial inspection trip to the Southwest Pacific, the War Department announced.

In unofficial quarters there are grave fears that the tall, 52-year-old airman and the crew of the Army plane on which he was making the trip had crashed in the Pacific.

The War Department announcement said:

"Captain Rickenbacker's plane was in radio contact with an island southwest of Honolulu during the afternoon of October 22, and was last heard from early that evening, when he reported that he had slightly more than one hour's supply of gasoline. No contact has been made with him since that time. Search is being made by all available air and sea forces."

(A dispatch from Honolulu quoted the Hawaiian Department of the U. S. Army as saying others were missing with Rickenbacker. It merely reiterated the Washington statement that all available facilities were being used in the search, and said no other information was available.)

Only a few days ago, Rickenbacker, who is president of the Eastern Air Lines, returned from an inspection trip of Army Air Forces facilities.

Yardley Man Goes To War in Memory of Buddy

YARDLEY, Oct. 24.—John Francis McCullough, who in the World War No. 1 was the first soldier to be trained at Fort Dix, and who had as his serial number 1271188, returned to the service on September 24, 1942, and was assigned the same serial number that he had in World War I. He is now stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C., in the officers' training school.

McCullough on September 24, 1918, stood in the trenches alongside of his best friend from Trenton, with whom he had enlisted and remained until the latter was shot down and killed in the Argonne. To commemorate this friendship, McCullough, although 46 years old and beyond the draft age, enlisted.

Since his return to service, McCullough has had a number of letters and communications from some of his old comrades who have read of his enlistment in Legion magazines.

Prior to his entrance into service he made his home with his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Neill, on Reading avenue, Yardley.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Activities of Interest To All In The Various Communities

GLEANED BY REPORTERS

A report for the crop committee was presented at the session of Northampton Township Farmers' Club this week in the Richboro chapel.

Joseph W. Halliwell told of the rain hindering farmers with their work.

The European corn borer the past season, said Mr. Halliwell, was much more destructive than usual. Much of the fodder was made useless, and as a result of this farmers may have to depend more upon their straw supply.

A very brief business session was conducted by the president, Samuel Pernar, and following this the club paper, "The Northampton Club Siftings," prepared by Mrs. Hugh Mason, was read by Mrs. Joseph A. Addis.

The October meeting of the Bucks County Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution was held at the home of Mrs. Ira Fravel at Wrightstown.

The business of the day was discussed and reports from the 45th State conference given. The reports dealt chiefly with the D. A. R.'s various contributions to the war effort and reminders of duty to Ellis Island.

Guest day was observed at the meeting of the Chalfont Floral Club in the Grange Hall at Chalfont, Wednesday morning and afternoon. Guests included representatives of the Chalfont Community Club, the New Britain Township Women's Club and the ladies' auxiliary of the Chalfont Fire Company.

Fourteen women assembled in the hall in the morning to mend garments for the Salvation Army, and about 40 persons attended the meeting in the afternoon.

During the business session seven new members were gained. They included Mrs. Frank P. McNair, Mrs. John D. Derstine, Mrs. Irvin S. Taylor, Mrs. Elwood H. Harrar, Mrs. Jonathan Scott, Mrs. Walter Baker and Mrs. Charles Edwards.

BRISTOL TOWNSHIP TO STAGE ITS FIRST CIVILIAN DEFENSE MOBILIZATION ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON, NOVEMBER 15TH

Residents of Bristol Township will witness their first dramatization of an "air raid" on Sunday afternoon, November 15th, between the hours of two and three o'clock, when the entire area under the jurisdiction of the Bristol Township Council of Defense stages its first Civilian Defense Mobilization. Announcement was made today by James E. Harris, executive director, that authorization had been received from the State Council of Defense to conduct a mock air raid on that date.

Under the supervision of the three separate councils in the area "casualties" will be cared for by first aid units, "bombed" homes will be evacuated, imaginary defense plant fires will be extinguished by the various volunteer companies, and invading parachute troops will be repulsed by emergency policemen in one of the largest demonstrations staged thus far in this part of Bucks County.

Air raid sirens will announce the beginning of the practice test promptly at two o'clock. Immediately all members of the civilian defense units will go into action. Casualties, bearing tags, denoting their injuries will be spread throughout the area and will be given first aid treatment by the volunteer defense workers. Transportation units will transport these same casualties to the local stations where they will be inspected by the medical corps to determine the accuracy and knowledge of the air raid wardens in first aid work. Red Cross units will follow their functions of caring for and feeding refugees from "bombed" homes and will use the evacuation centers to learn if adequate space has been provided.

In Croydon area, the newly-established control center will have its first "workout." The center, which is reported to be one of the best equipped in the county, is located in the old Badger School building on State road. Three telephones have been installed and residents of that community have enjoyed twenty-four hour watch service for more than a week. All calls for the Croydon area emanate from there. Chiefs of each of the organizations gather at the center immediately following each air raid alarm and all units are directed from the co-ordinated center.

The school has been partitioned off so that all lights within the building may be lit, yet no light shows on the outside of the building. A telephone board divided into four sections with each section painted the color of the warning light received carries the numbers of the telephone calls to be made on that particular light. This board simplifies the work of the watchers to such an extent that mistakes are almost impossible. The center is also equipped with a large map of the Croydon area, one of the Township and one of the County. These maps will be used by the chiefs in determining where their units are located at all times.

One hundred and sixty-eight persons have volunteered to serve in two-hour shifts so that the Community of Croydon will be on the alert every minute of the day for any air raid signals. The center is conducted under the direction of Co-ordinator Louis C. Surrick, who will work directly under Commander Franklin Wallin of the Fourth Area.

In Newportville the orders will emanate from the Newportville fire house where the chiefs will gather under the direction of George Emy. All activities will be coordinated from there.

BRIDE HAS FOUR SISTERS AS HER ATTENDANTS

Miss Mary Margaret O'Neill Becomes Wife of Mr. Charles W. Hauser

ST. MARK'S CEREMONY

Four sisters of Miss Mary Margaret O'Neill were her attendants this morning when at a nuptial mass in St. Mark's R. C. Church she became the bride of Mr. Charles W. Hauser, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hauser, Middletown Township.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Neill, Middletown Township, and her quartet of attendants were: Mrs. Joseph Coughlan, Middletown Township, matron of honor; and the Misses Ruth and Theresa O'Neill, Middletown Township, and Miss Gertrude O'Neill, Princeton, N. J., who served as bridesmaids.

The attractive October ceremony was solemnized before an altar which had been enhanced with white chrysanthemums and palms. The Rev. Father Albert Glass officiated.

Mr. Hauser had as his attendant his brother, Mr. Walter Hauser; and the ushers were inclusive of: Messrs. Joseph O'Neill, brother of the bride; and Harry and Bernard Kitten, cousins of the groom.

Miss Katherine Keating, Linden street, presided at the organ console, playing the bridal march from Lohengrin as the party entered the edifice. For the recessional she used the Mendelssohn march. The vocalist was Miss Alice Rafferty, Buckley street, whose offerings were: "Because," "I Love You Truly," "Ave Maria," "O Lord I Am Not Worthy" and "On This Day O Beautiful Mother."

The handsome white satin gown worn by the bride had inserts of lace medallions, these appearing on the yoke, on the long full skirt, near the edge of the full train, and also forming the points of the long sleeves. The bodice was shirred, and the gown had a wide midriff. To the taria of orange blossoms was attached an escalloped tulle veil, finger-tip length. The bride wore white satin slippers. As she entered the church she carried a white prayer book, topped by lavender-toned orchids. For the recessional she carried an arm bouquet of white roses. Her only piece of jewelry worn for the occasion was a gold cross and chain.

The attendants wore gowns patterned alike, but in different color tones. Mrs. Coughlan wore a costume consisting of a deep blue velvet bodice and light blue tulle skirt; and the bridesmaids wore gowns which had bodices of dusty rose velvet, and deep pink tulle skirts. The floor-length skirts had a brief sweep. Sleeves were bracelet length, and necklines were sweetheart style. Each attendant wore on her hair a spray of artificial flowers matching the skirt of her gown, and from these fell matching shoulder-length face veils. Satin slippers were in harmonizing tones. Mrs. Coughlan carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums; and the trio of bridesmaids carried pink mums. Each young woman wore a gold cross and chain, gifts from the bride.

The groom's gifts to his attendants were tie sets.

A reception was held in the Terrace Room of the Stacy-Trent Hotel, Trenton, N. J., an orchestra providing music for dancing. Mr. Hauser and wife are spending 10 days at Niagara Falls, N. Y. For the journey the bride wore a suit of teal blue, mink neckpiece and dark brown hat and accessories. Her corsage was of orchids. The couple will reside in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Charles O'Neill selected for the wedding a gown of soldier blue, black accessories, and corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother chose a black gown, black and white accessories, and white rose corsage.

Six billion dollars and another six billion dollars.

Before the tax collector is through picking the feathers off you he will be back for pieces of the skin.

Enough money has been appropriated by Washington to support you in the style to which you never were accustomed.

But you'll get used to it.

The man who has worked himself up to a fine big salary can now work himself up to a fine big headache.

Money is the curse of mankind and at the moment is the subject of the most profane conversation.

The man who put aside a little for a rainy day had better look out the window. This looks like it.

If the idea is to prevent inflation there is no danger of the balloon bursting but it may collapse of under-nourishment.

What in the world do you suppose Henry Morgenthau is going to do with 12 billion dollars—buy Europe?

Twelve billion would have licked the depression six times but we couldn't get it up that high.

Thought for the day: Brother—can you spare a dime?

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

In the opinion of Dr. R. F. Corbett, director of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, a severe food shortage may become the dominant issue in this country if farmers are unable to employ agricultural labor at reasonable cost.

"The idea that the country has plenty of food is one of the biggest mistakes we are making," he asserted. "If our farmers get a bad break or two from the weather, on top of the difficulties of the labor shortage, farm production may drop down to a point where a national food shortage will be our greatest domestic problem."

Dr. Corbett was disturbed that a government project in Maryland, carpenters were receiving more than $100 a week and water boys as much as $60 a week, while nearly all farmers offering peak farm wages of $3 a day, were unable to find any help.

It takes no more than a glance at the figures submitted by Dr. Corbett to understand why the farmers, in that instance were unable to employ labor. The draft and the high pay offered by industry have already drained from the farms hundreds of thousands of men. The director of selective service says that it has been necessary to tell the farmers that they cannot all be deferred from military service, because some of them are not raising any more than as much as their families can support.

He says the extent to which they can be deferred, or to which children's education will be curtailed, will be measured by the required improvement in farm and industrial production. "We must realize," he said, "that we may see the time when our youngsters will have to do farm work or do something else useful four or five hours a day."

Recently a proposal was made by the War Manpower Commission that college and high school students be used to relieve the shortage of farm labor. George R. Brakely, vice president of Princeton University, cited the difficulty in expecting students themselves preparing for war service under an accelerated program, to find time to be effective in easing the farm labor shortage. He also said he did not see how the problem of transporting students to and from farms can be solved with the present shortage of gasoline and tires.

Transportation under current conditions certainly presents a problem, but if school buses can be used in rural areas to bring farmers' children to village schools, they can be used when the need is desperate to bring village and city pupils to the farms to aid in planting and harvesting.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Inspector Hare arrived about five minutes after the ambulance men, and Chris Hall, who was at his office and got the police call, barely five minutes after that.

I suppose it was obvious that any questioning of Pete Raymond would have to be done at once, right on the spot. There was no reviving Howell, his pulse was almost gone and he was terribly injured. Raymond must have fallen on him, or had the fall broken in some way, for in spite of the bullet in his shoulder, he was in far better shape. After the doctor gave him a hypo he talked very coherently for a little while.

"I came to see my wife," he said, "and was with her two or three hours. She was very quiet, dozing. I think I got a hunch somebody was in the hall, so I opened the door. It was this guy. I knew he'd been trailing me."

"Why was he trailing you?" Hare asked.

Pete mumbled something about Howell being no good.

"So you fought, and in the scuffle you went over the banister. But who had the gun?"

"He did. Turned on me. Shot at me, tried to push me over the railing," Pete said. His voice was failing.

"How long have you known Gilbert Castle, Mr. Raymond?" Hare asked.

"Long enough, the so-and-so," Pete gasped, but he did not say so-and-so.

"Why did you kill him?" Hare asked.

Pete opened his eyes again, and I think his lips formed the words "didn't" and then he was out. The doctor gave the stretcher-bearers the signal.

"Why did he kill him?" Hare asked.

"Oh, he didn't," she said. "It's impossible. I know he didn't."

"Why did he hate him?"

It was a crime to question her, for now that it was all over her little strength was gone, her whole body was shaking, her face gray, in the dim hall light.

"I don't know, Mr. Hare. I'm just as surprised as you are at what he said. I didn't even know that he knew him."

"O.K.," Hare said. I don't think that even he doubted her. She was too sick, too distracted to lie.

Chris Hall picked her up and carried her upstairs, and this time she made no objection. Peg and I made her as comfortable as we could, and called her doctor, and one by one all the others came in to see if they could help. Miss Martin offered a hot-water bottle, Mrs. Strom an egg-nog, "with plenty of schnapps to give her strength, poor thing," and even Mr. Fissel ventured to inquire if there was anything he could do.

Once more all our little animosities were forgotten. When I came out of the room with the doctor even Mr. McMurry and Madame Hurd, the arch enemies, were talking like bosom friends.

"She will have to go to a hospital at once," the doctor said. "She can't be nursed here, and the sooner she is moved the better. Of course, I don't know anything about her finances."

"I'll take care of it," Peg promised recklessly.

Dear Peg, she'd give the shirt off her back to anyone in trouble.

"She can be moved to the county hospital later," the doctor said, "if she can't manage it."

"I'll manage it," Peg repeated firmly.

tor is giving instruction in the Old Testament each Sunday night at the Fellowship.

The Mother's Guild will meet on Tuesday in the parish house. A financial statement for the first three quarters of the year 1942 will be at the church on Sunday. The vestry has voted to have the church building painted inside and outside. The exterior of the parish house also will be painted. Work on this will begin very soon.

FOR THE FESTIVE SEASON

In spite of war, priorities, food shortages and nutrition problems, housewives continue to grace their tables with attractive desserts. They realize a dessert that is pleasing to the eye, healthful and nutritious, sets off a meal as nothing else can — and they are constantly searching for something novel.

Have you ever thought of varying the toppings on your favorite dessert as various holidays arrive and holiday dishes are in order? Perhaps you lean toward rennet-custards on account of the children or merely because you all like these healthful dainties and appreciate the fact that light, cold desserts seem to be ideal after a heavy holiday meal as well as for a light hot-weather luncheon or dinner.

Make your usual dessert, using either tablets or rennet powder. Vary your flavors as you wish. Then add toppings to fit the occasion.

For Halloween, half a peach may be used to represent a face on your chocolate rennet-custard. Triangular portions of the peach feature the eyes, nose and mouth.

When Thanksgiving arrives, your lemon flavored dessert may be centered with a star shaped by five kernels of corn candy with a raisin in the middle.

Christmas calls for chocolate flavor topped with red and green cherries, representing green leaves and red holly berries; New Year's is ideal for maple flavor with a whipped cream clock and numbers; while Valentine's Day brings raspberry flavoring with a solid white heart of whipped cream centered with a little red heart cut from a maraschino cherry.

Other variations may be worked out for Easter, Fourth of July or any holiday, birthday or special event. Your family and your guests will appreciate the slight effort necessary to place such novelties before them and you will find that eye appeal is an important item in the preparation of desserts.

Your Favorite Milk Dessert — Rennet-Custard
(In Any of 6 Different Flavors)

You need: 1 package (any flavor) rennet powder; 1 pint milk, not canned.

Set out 4 or 5 dessert glasses. Warm milk slowly, stirring constantly. Test a drop on the inside of wrist frequently. When COMFORTABLY WARM, (110° F.) not hot, remove at once from heat. Stir contents of package into milk briskly until dissolved — not over one minute. Pour at once, while still liquid, into individual dessert glasses. Do not move until firm — about 10 minutes. Chill. Serve in same glasses. Toppings are added to chilled rennet-custards just before serving.

Important Points to Remember

These are non-cooked desserts so the temperature of the milk is just lukewarm — not hot.

Rennet-custards are always poured into individual serving dishes — NEVER spooned from a large bowl.

BEST rennet-custards are well chilled.

and Miss Jean Caucci, Lincoln avenue, was sponsor for Carmella.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McMahon, Collingswood, N. J., and Tech. Sgt. James Rodgers and wife, Earlton, N. J., were Monday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hendrickson, Garden street. Sgt. Rodgers and wife have now left for Battle Creek, Mich., where the former is stationed.

Erie Times Backs Martin

Announcing editorial support of the candidacy of General Edward Martin, Republican candidate for Governor, the Erie Times says:

The General (Martin) is no swashbuckling warrior. The love and respect he earned from his men was based on his kind deeds and his thoughtful leadership. His recognized military record plus his ability as a political leader makes him the ideal candidate to be our next Governor.

As this nation's interests are on the ever-widening battlefronts and resolves to pour its heart and hopes into the struggle to make the world forever safe from the tragic hammer blows of organized war, Pennsylvania looks to General Martin as the soldier-Governor who can co-ordinate its far-flung resources and hurl them with smashing impact into the battle for world freedom and decency.

His election will bring together the vital links of industrialism and give a powerful lift to civilian unity. His is the exacting discipline of a man who knows we cannot turn blindly from the brutal facts of war. He knows the horrible carnage of armed conflict.

General Martin's philosophy is enduring Americanism. We are for him.

BASEBALL MAY EXPECT MANY CHANGES IN 1943

By Jack Mahon
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(INS)—The youngest team ever to beat the smartest, most experienced team in World Series history, the amazing St. Louis Cardinals, are champions of the baseball world—but will there be a baseball empire for them to rule in 1943?

That's a question that a lot of folks would like to have the answer to these days but after discussing the matter with several of the diamond business big-wigs at the recently completed battles between the Cards and the Yankees we'd be inclined to think there will be a baseball season next Spring.

Of course if those dictators on the other side of the pond are inconsiderate enough to drop a couple of bombs on our shores there will be no sport of any kind. But until they do—and there's little chance of them doing so, in our humble opinion—we think the President will O. K. the national pastime.

FDR gave the sport the green light this past year because he realized the necessity of an emotional outlet for his war workers on the home front. Nothing like a guy get off steam in a healthy manner better than baseball and while the game undoubtedly will be only a reasonable facsimile of the original it will be better than no game at all.

As Horace Stoneham, president of the N. Y. Giants, who finished third in the National League this season told the writer some weeks ago, we will have a game played by a handful of veterans, several kids who are below the present draft age limit and the balance to be comprised of married players, now in the big show, who have wives and families dependent on them.

Of course, by the time April 1943 rolls around there may be a draft of not only the kids of 18 but of some married men, too. If that happens you can forget all about baseball and everything else.

Judge Landis, Commissioner of the game, and the president of both leagues, Ford Frick and Will Harridge say they are going to conduct "business as usual" and will continue to do so until they are advised otherwise.

Even if there is a league it will be hard to recognize the two champions. The N. Y. Yankees will be riddled in the next couple of months as Joe Gordon, Bill Dickey, Phil Rizzuto, George Selkirk, Buddy Hassett and several others leave for wartime assignments. Gordon is going in the Air Corps as is Dickey; Rizzuto will enlist with the Coast Guard; Selkirk and Hassett expect to enter the Navy.

Johnny Beazley will probably be in the Marines by the time this reaches print and he is only one member of the youthful Cards who will be engaged in a more serious game by the time the 1943 Spring training season rolls around.

The same thing will happen to every club in each league, creating a freak set-up, to be sure for next season, but, by the same token, making it a more even group of competitors.

ties in the West Bristol area will be directed from that source.

Edgely will use the Edgely school house until a more suitable place has been established. In that area Elwood Britton is in charge and will co-ordinate the activities.

All units of the organization will function throughout the Township. To all areas except Croydon the mobilization will be an innovation. Croydon has had two such practice tests previously, but has not as yet enjoyed the opportunity to test out the newly-established center.

Officials of the County will be invited to attend the practice of November 15th. Mr. Harris stated. It is hoped that residents throughout the Township will co-operate with the Defense units. It was announced that traffic on the main highways would travel as usual and that normal habits of the citizenry would not be interfered with.

Louis C. Surick, Executive Director of the Croydon Council of Defense, has called a meeting of all chiefs of the defense organizations. The session will be held in the control center at the Badger School on Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock. Matters of importance will be taken up and all chiefs are urged to attend.

Crowd Attends Play By Bensalem Students

tirely convincing as the sympathetic friend of Peter Adair; the latter part being played exceptionally well by Joseph Lechtenegger. Much of the evening's hilarity was due to the comic attempts of James Carson, as the Inane Sheriff Heckenshell. James DeGour, a freshman, was no less convincing as his stupid assistant. Both interpretations were refreshing in their originality. Cecelia Juliff, as Hilda, the Swedish maid, soon won favor with the audience by her amusing episodes of bravado in a house apparently inhabited by lunatics. She was consistent in her accent and character interpretation. The part of the attractive ingenue was capably played by Shirley Boyd, while Edna Mae Fortnum was attractive and pleasant as her much frightened friend.

A choice tid-bit of the evening was the splendid work done by Pearl Perry, who more than once sent the audience into gales of laughter as the jolly maid, Blanche. This colored girl shows great promise and should continue her work in dramatics. It was hard to believe that hundred year old Tibby was actually a young Freshmen girl Natalie Koplin. Her work was worthy of great merit. From the moment of his entrance John Diamond was a favorite with the large audience, as the romantic lead, Clem Durward. His manner and interpretation gave an otherwise stock part a charm that made his entirely ingratiating. Marie Gebicke, in a brief role completed the well trained cast.

A unique scene had been produced by the students under the leadership of George Geiges, Daniel Hughes, and Raymond Cribbe. It was duly weird and the original lighting arrangement lent the proper atmosphere for this mystery.

The entire production moved with an ease and lightness seldom reached in amateur productions. Although the enunciation on the part of some of the members of the cast might have been improved upon, nevertheless the spontaneity and freshness of the entire performance more than made up for this minor breach. The Bensalem Township High School students can be proud of their work.

Among those active in the success of the production were David Dallas, Richard Berg, Jack Hansen, Edward Cragg, Marie Haenschen, Rita Robbins, Russell Kelly, Jack Kidd, Louis Ashton, Helen Mack, Judith Lappan. Music was provided by the high school band under the baton of Miss Grace Paist, supervisor of music.

SPORTS PARADE by EDWARD W. COCHRANE

All sports are not going to fold up because of the war, but some of them will. Reason is obvious. There won't be enough men to take part in some sports because Uncle Sam is going to take all of the able bodied ones between the ages of 18 and 40 before long. That's reason enough. The war is more important than any sport. However, we need sports as amusement to furnish relaxation for folks who stay at home and dig up taxes with which to carry on the war.

It is estimated that 60 per cent of the ball players who were in the major leagues the past season, will be in service by March 1. If that is true the majors will not operate, unless they want to be content with a lot of old time players who have drifted back to the minors or out of the game altogether. It will be necessary, no doubt, to cut the season to four months, abolish training camps, and start about May 1, finishing Labor Day. Whether there will be a world's series in 1943 is problematical. At least it is doubtful.

Colleges to Lose Players

Boys 18 and 19 years of age will be subject to draft before long. Then there won't be many college football players, so it is likely there will be no college football next year. Maybe the colleges won't be mad after the shock they received by the decided falling off of attendance to opening games this year. Looks as though no university will equal last year's gate receipts figures. Too many people are too busy with war work to attend and the gas and rubber question has much to do with the attendance curtailment.

Professional football is likely to be in the same boat. Many players will rush into service of Uncle Sam after the present season ends in December. Want to enlist before they are drafted. The result will be no material with which to have clubs. Next meeting of the league in December will be an important one. If they operate at all they likely will cut the player limit to 18 instead of 33 and even at that figure they will have trouble getting material.

Recruiting Ground Lost

In the past the "pros" have always taken the cream of the college crop to use in building up for the next pro season. Now it looks as though there will be no college crop to pick from because boys leaving college next spring will go right into the armed forces. That will eliminate professional recruiting. "Pro" football without young men would be a joke. Thus the National League is apt to suspend for the duration.

Tennis, golf, skiing and a lot of other sports in which young men take part are cancelling all tournament competition until after the war. Most of the players already are in service.

Racing Will Continue

Racing will continue. It is the one sport that is not seriously affected by the war as far as personnel is concerned. Most racing men are above the age limit. Jockeys are to be taken but there will be enough apprentice jockeys below 18 years of age to do all the riding necessary. Florida tracks will open this winter but they admit they do not expect to make money. Merely want to furnish competition for horsemen and to keep the sport alive. California tracks also will operate—at least some of them. Tracks in the middle-west plan on operating.

Col. Matt Winn says he will have the Kentucky Derby again in May even if he has only three entries, because he does not want to go a year without a Derby. But he does not expect a big crowd. Breeders of thoroughbreds are going right ahead with their plans to race, although a few stables are to be combined for the duration.

3,000 Boxers in Service

Boxing virtually will be at a standstill. Most prominent boxers have gone into the service. More than 3,000 amateurs and "pros" are in the armed forces. The rest will be in very shortly. So fight clubs will fold up. The last place to quit will be New York and Mike Jacobs expects to suspend eventually.

There will be softball, fishing and some other competitive sports which boys and men not eligible for service will enjoy, but spectator sports are just about washed up. At least on the scale they have been presented in the past, until Uncle Sam takes care of the job of whipping the Japs and their pals in the Axis.

Some Potential Grid Champs

Potential champions in football—Minnesota, Utah, Georgia, Rice, Boston College. Some of these may be beaten in their own conferences, but the ones that whip them are very likely to finish in front. The Gophers have marvelous material. Ike Armstrong, coach at Utah, has ruled the Rocky Mountain region for some time and seems sure to continue. Georgia has the powerhouse of Dixie, sparked by Frankie Sinkwich. Boston College is good enough to give all Eastern opposition all it can handle.

Jim Gallagher of the Cubs, says Jimmy Wilson, will retain his job in 1943, which sets at rest all rumors that Phil Wrigley will make a change there. There will be some changes on the club, but there will be some on all major league clubs because of losing men to Uncle Sam.

Make Second Attack On Genoa

London—For the second successive night, the city of Genoa and other vital industrial regions of northern Italy were attacked by the Royal Air Force last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

Simultaneously, the Italian High Command asserted that United States bombers had been shot down by Italian fighters and anti-aircraft fire, but investigation disclosed that Rome was referring to the battle of Egypt and not the new Genoa attack.

An official British announcement said: "The bomber command last night sent another strong force over Northern Italy, but the weather was not as good as on Thursday night and bombing conditions were difficult."

"Genoa was attacked again through heavy clouds. Turin and Savona also were bombed."

"Three British bombers are missing."

Little Encouragement for "Drys"

London—Little encouragement for the "bone-drys" who are attempting to bring prohibition back in the United States was held out today by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in her first press conference on British soil.

One American reporter asked flatly whether "there is going to be prohibition at home again."

She explained that with measures afoot to send 18-year-old inductees into combat service, there is considerable agitation to restore prohibition but added she thought it unlikely any such law would be adopted in the near future.

Mrs. Roosevelt met the 100 men and women reporters in a large conference room at the Embassy, where chairs had been arranged like church pews to accommodate the reporters. She herself was provided with an enormous green leather chair—which she never occupied.

"I am interested in every phase of what women in Great Britain have accomplished," she said.

"You have had many more years of experience than we. A great many men and some women have thought at home that women would not be needed for various things. They are now finding that women are very much needed for a good many things."
